Happy Singing And Sing Everyday !

AUTHOR BIO. I grew up in a musical family. I started teaching guitar in high school and have two brothers that are professional musicians and music teachers, violin and opera. I managed a campus coffee house in college and got to book and perform with many famous performers. After college I started teaching singing and wrote my first singing book. A few years later I wrote a much larger book and taught singing workshops all over the USA. In Hollywood I met and sold singing books to many famous actors and singers. I started composing songs and music in college and have taught song-writing for years. My decades of teaching experience makes me sure that anyone who can talk can sing. It only takes learning how to tune your voice.

Like many musicians I have had various odd jobs in-between teaching and performing gigs. While writing my 1st singing book I ran my own health food buffet and managed a metaphysical bookstore. When I wrote singing book number two, I sold handmade guitars and played guitar in a health food restaurant. While writing singing book number 3, I was teaching music lessons and selling musical instruments on E-Bay.

Music is my life. Composing and performing and teaching music. I have taught singing, guitar, songwriting and banjo, just about anywhere one can teach it. Schools, music stores, churches, conventions, colleges, national parks, in my car, where I lived, outdoors, and now over the Internet.

I really believe that the ability to speak and sing is a Gift from God to every man, woman, or child on earth.

Teach Yourself Singing If You Can Talk You Can Sing is my gift to you.

Happy Singing. Timothy Kelly.
